Microsoft Dynamics AX (formerly Microsoft Axapta) is a multilanguage, multicurrency enterprise resource planning (ERP) solution with core strengths in manufacturing and e-business, and an additional strong functionality for the wholesale and services industries.

Advantage Dynamics AX

Dynamics AX is an adaptable business management solution designed for companies that demand a modern Windows based support system for resource handling and that wish to simplify and harmonise their processes to strengthen their ability to react swiftly according to the constant changes both within and outside of the company.

Dynamics AX is developed to be suitable for companies that are located in several different places and that are in need of a standardized and flexible solution for the whole group. Dynamics AX is a truly international solution, with an integrated support for a large number of languages and currencies.

Dynamics AX is a modern and platform independent solution, fully developed to easily support web based usage, erasing the border between business and e-business. Dynamics AX can easily be tailored to fit the needs of your company. All of Dynamics AX's functions are handled in the included modules. All modules are there from start but the user only pay for the ones they utilize and can benefit from.

Dynamics AX is a part of Microsoft's most important growth area, which means both short- and long-term benefits for the user. Thanks to the open architecture the user also have the possibility to choose supplier among Microsoft's partners.

Dynamics AX is seen by many companies as a very price worthy business solution in comparison with its competitors. Dynamics AX adjustable user interface and open architecture also makes the system cheaper and easier to adjust, both for the company as a whole and for the individual user.

Dynamics AX – all-in-one

Traditionally, business management solutions has been relatively closed systems, like separate islands without any connection to other systems. Dynamics AX creates an opportunity to rationalise according to principles as "one registration" and "everyone has the same information".

The advantages with many modules in one system is obvious. A good example is Dynamics AX CRM. It is simple to access information about what the customer has bought earlier, open tenders, non-paid claims and names/addresses. All information is stored in one place and can be accessed by all authorized users.

"All-in-one" stands for a completely integrated solution with business logic, a source code, a database and a developing tool. Databases that can be used are Microsoft SQL Server and Oracle.

Enterprise Portal is a role based web portal built with Dynamics AX's own developing tool. The portal aims to broaden and simplify the work for occasional users. There are also predefined roles for customers and suppliers which gives them access to chosen functionality and information.

Dynamics AX – an international system

Dynamics AX is a very extensive business management solution for midsize and larger companies. Dynamics AX includes functions for the whole business, including manufacturing, distribution, logistics, project management, economy, CRM, employee handling as well as business analyses.

The system is available in almost 30 languages and with local functionality based on local demands. Via a three layer solution and/or web portals the system can be run on one installation for the whole group.

Dynamics AX – functions

Dynamics AX include a large number of functionalities. The system is build as a general product to be sold within most business areas. Microsoft only sells their system through close partners that often builds branch unique systems. Microsoft is responsible for the product and partners, for example Sogeti, sells the solution including implementation (and more) and the product licence.

Dynamics AX – easy to modify

The keen competition today demands of companies to profile themselves and their business. This means that a continuous change of IT systems and applications is needed. One of the cornerstones of Dynamics AX is that it is very easily adapted. Modifications can be made at four different levels:

- Directly in the user application for users or a group of users
- Through the Drag'n Drop-function in the administration tool
- Through programming in Dynamics AX's development environment
- Through development of external applications that easily can be integrated into Dynamics AX

Dynamics AX – an adjustable system

The open architecture of Dynamics AX makes it simple for your company to further develop and adjust your system to your special needs and wishes, including easy integration with other systems within or outside of the company. The open architecture also means a freedom of choice for the buyer to choose which Microsoft partner to cooperate with when it comes to licences, deliveries, further developments and operation.
